McGuire is arguably Washington's most accomplished photographer. His photos have appeared in hundreds of newspapers, airline magazines and travel publications. His images have been used by four Presidential Inaugural Committees for use in the official inaugural programs and other printed pieces. His photos decorate the offices of dozens of law firms, associations and government relations offices. Members of Congress give out his photos of the US Capitol to donors and supporters as 'thank-you' gifts. He has 7 coffee table books in print and he recently returned from Azerbaijan where he is working on a book on Baku, the capital city. The Post's Style section featured McGuire and his work in a colorful, two page article in August 2010.
